

Program Details

Schedule: Delegates depart by bus from Manhattan on Monday, April 8th at around 12:00 PM and return to NYC on Friday, April 12th sometime in the afternoon. Conference registration and a welcome reception will take place on Monday evening at the Naval Academy. The first conference session will begin on Tuesday morning, and final presentations are made on Thursday evening.

Note: A mandatory orientation will be held before the conference in Manhattan on Friday, April 5th at 4:30 PM. Please apply only if you are absolutely sure you will be able to attend the orientation and the entire conference.

Please note that a virtual orientation is available for students who live more than 90 minutes outside of New York City.*

Transportation: One To World delegates will travel as a group by bus to and from the conference. This ticket is included in the application fee. Further transportation details will be provided upon selection.

Fees: The delegate conference fee is $200. This fee covers the registration fee, round-trip transportation from NYC, accommodations, and most meals. Delegates are responsible for any spending money they may require for souvenirs, snacks and meals not provided by the academy. Conference fees will only be collected by those accepted into the program. It is free to apply.
NOTE: Possible scholarships are available!

Lodging & Meals: Student delegates will be housed in a hotel near the conference site. Meals will be provided in the Midshipmen Dining Hall.

Attire: Business casual attire is appropriate for working sessions and tours. The banquet is semi-formal; we suggest coat and tie, cocktail dress, or your country's national dress. Rain gear, a jacket or sweater, and comfortable walking shoes are also recommended. All delegates are encouraged to bring sportswear for activities (sailing, sports, etc.).

About One To World

To advance global cooperation, One To World fosters intercultural understanding by creating face-to-face experiences among local communities, international students and Fulbright scholars.

In addition to this foreign affairs conference, One To World has many other programs that bring Americans and international students face-to-face to share their perspectives in life changing ways, including day-long and overnight community visits, New York City community discovery programs, campus-to-career workshops, and many social activities.

Another important One To World program is Global Classroom, which gives international students the opportunity to teach American K-12 students about their countries and cultures by leading interactive workshops in New York City public schools.

One To World is designated by the United States Department of State as the official Coordinator of Enrichment Programs for visiting Fulbright grantees in the greater New York area.

64th Annual Naval Academy Foreign Affairs Conference (NAFAC)

"Where Power Lies: The Development of Civil-Military
Relations in a New World Order"

April 8 — April 12, 2023

United States Naval Academy
Annapolis, Maryland

An application for International Students & Scholars

Conference Theme

Each year since 1960, the U.S. Naval Academy has hosted a gathering of delegates from universities around the U.S. and the world who come together to discuss a theme on current global affairs.

The conference has grown to be one of the leading undergraduate conferences in the country. It welcomes over 150 delegates from countries around the world, and it has heard speakers as notable as former U.S. Presidents George Bush and Bill Clinton, former U.S. Secretary of Defense Robert Gates, and former U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton.

The 64th annual Naval Academy Foreign Affairs Conference (NAFAC) invites students from civilian and military institutions to explore issues related to this year's theme of, "WHERE POWER LIES: The Development of Civil-Military Relations in a New World Order."

The conference will explore how authoritarian states seek to weaponize modern constructs against democratic states, and how democracies around the world are seeking to heal their internal and external divisions in order to promote stability in the international community. How has the damaged reputation of international organizations affected democracies around the world? What will be the outcome of more advanced forms of cyberwarfare? How has the Russian invasion of Ukraine impacted the foreign policy of European countries and the United States? Why is Nationalism on the rise and what will the global implications be? How has digitalization affected cultural identity, differences between generations and the dissemination of information?

These are just some of the questions and topics that will be covered in the diverse set of roundtable discussions at the conference.

Application Deadline:

Friday, February 9th
By 5:00PM EST

Please submit your application using this form.

Conference Structure

The conference consists of four plenary sessions, three roundtable sessions, and a variety of social activities. The discussions are meant to simulate "real-life" policy making; negotiating disputes, compromises, and successes that policy makers regularly face.

1-3 international delegates will be assigned to each roundtable. Please list your preferences on the application form. We will try to assign delegates to their preferred roundtable, but assignments may be limited by group size and the need to create balanced representation.

Student delegates, who attend civilian and military institutions from around the United States and the world, are joined in these small group sessions by senior participants from the industrial sector, academia, the armed services, and the diplomatic corps. Senior participants will assist and moderate student delegates in analyzing contemporary foreign policy issues that affect the long-term interests of the United States.

The plenary sessions provide delegates the opportunity to hear the views of leaders closely involved in the study of international relations and the formulation of U.S. foreign policy. Speakers from recent years have included former U.S. President, George H. Bush; former U.S. Secretary of State, Madeleine Albright; former Director of the CIA, John Deutch; former Australian Ambassador to the U.S., John McCarthy; former Ambassador to China, Jon Huntsman, former Secretary of State, Hillary Rodham Clinton, and former U.S. President, Bill Clinton.

Social opportunities include a welcome reception, a banquet on the conference's last evening, yard-wide activities, free time around Annapolis, as well as the meals throughout the conference.

The entire structure of the conference is designed to provide a premiere educational experience for the student delegates. Not only will the students have the opportunity to interact with experts in national security and foreign policy, they will also learn from each other. As delegates depart Annapolis at the conclusion of NAFAC, they will have a greater understanding of the complexities surrounding foreign policy development.

One To World's Delegation

One To World's delegation of international undergraduate and graduate students was first invited to participate in this foreign policy debate in 1991.

One To World's delegation plays a special role in this prestigious foreign affairs conference by adding a critical international perspective to the student deliberations on U.S. foreign policy. As international student participants, One To World delegates enrich the conference with their various national and cultural perspectives, as well as their academic experience. In turn, American undergraduate conference participants and midshipmen from the Naval Academy share their cultural, political, and educational views with One To World's delegates in an exciting academic and social setting.
